Biographical Note

The Leo Baeck Institute (LBI) London Pamphlet Collection offers a distinctive set of primary sources on German-Jewish history and culture, compiled over the years by the Institute's former directors, including notable figures such as Robert Weltsch and Dr. Arnold Paucker.

The earliest pamphlet in the collection, authored by Heinrich Heine, dates back to 1837, while the majority of items were published between 1917 and 1939. A second significant period spans from the 1950s to the 1980s.

Scope and Contents

The Leo Baeck Institute (LBI) London Pamphlet Collection offers a distinctive set of primary sources on German-Jewish history and culture, compiled over the years by the Institute's former directors, including notable figures such as Robert Weltsch and Dr. Arnold Paucker. The earliest pamphlet in the collection, authored by Heinrich Heine, dates back to 1837, while the majority of items were published between 1917 and 1939. A second significant period spans from the 1950s to the 1980s.

Journals and Newsletters:

The collection holds institutional information materials such as the LBI Newsletter, LBI Library and Archive News, and Germania Judaica.

Historical periodicals:

The collection holds a number of historical periodicals from the early 20th Century such as 'Neue Jüdische Monatshefte' (1917-1919) or 'Der Junge Jude' (1928-1930).

Material on leading figures in German-Jewish History and Culture:

The collection includes a wide range of materials on the LBI London's past directors Robert Weltsch and Dr. Arnold Paucker. Other prominent figures featured here include: Martin Buber, Theodor Herzl, Rosa Luxemburg, Moses Mendelssohn and Walther Rathenau, to mention just a few.

The Zionist Movement in Germany and leaflets about Mandate-Palestine:

There is a large body of information on the early history of the Zionist Movement in Germany including aims and objectives, fund raising efforts, conference proceedings and material regarding the Balfour Declaration. Newsletters and other pamphlets, often illustrated, report on crucial tasks such as developing a basic infrastructure, housing, agriculture and key industries in Mandate-Palestine.

German-Jewish Literature:

The collection offers a wide range of literary texts such as essays, novellas, poetry, plays, short traditional tales and children's stories. It also contains portraits of writers, discussions on linguistics and also a few in-depth biographies,

Biographies:

A number of pamphlets engage with the life of German-Jewish scientists, scholars, politicians, authors and artists. Also included are the 31 volumes of Salomon Wininger's 'Grosse Jüdische Nationalbiographie' (published in the 1920's) with over 9000 entries on Jewish personae.

Antisemitic Propaganda:

The collection holds a range of antisemitic pamphlets that were collected with the intent to document Nazi propaganda aimed against the Jews. We also hold testimonies of German-Jewish responses to politics of discrimination and persecution; there are a number of Jewish pamphlets countering the NSDAP's accusations and advocating resistance.

Publications regarding the Holocaust:

This section comprises publications published by different memorial sites and a wealth of material regarding the so called "Kristallnacht" (Night of the broken glass). In addition survivors tell their life stories in a number of unpublished manuscripts and published memoirs. There are also family histories, some researched by private individuals, others by secondary schools.

Portraits of Jewish Communities in Europe:

There is an array of articles and research on Jewish communities in German speaking areas, such as in Fürth, Frankfurt, Berlin, Trier, Würzburg, Werl, Malchow, Danzig and many more.

---The collection also holds a number of published address books with personal details of German-Jewish refugees after 1933 across the world that might be of interest for academic purposes.

The LBI London Pamphlet Collection, containing over 2000 items, is a treasure trove of German-Jewish History and Culture. Items cover a wide range of subjects in an equally wide range of languages. Besides German and English, Hebrew and several other languages are represented, thus reflecting the transnational character of German-Jewish History and Culture. The earliest publication, a pamphlet by Heinrich Heine, dates from 1837 whilst the majority of the other items were published between 1917 and 1939. A second important period spans from ca. 1950 through to the 1980's.

Der Antisemitismus als Angriff auf die Seele : eine dringende jugendpsychologische Erörterung / Michael Müller-Claudius., 1931.

Scope and Contents

An essay; 15 pages.; Warns of the dangers of antisemitism, not just for the Jews but for the Germans, both individually and on a national level. Notes that young people, who are pugnacious and seek concrete targets, can easily be incited by it. Antisemitism corrupts a young person morally, but even worse, it affects his psyche, his capabilities, and his soul. It causes his emotional life to atrophy, and this in turn affects his ability for objective observation and discernment, without which he cannot take charge of his life. German youngsters have difficulties coming to terms with the complicated German political reality, which does not match their high ideals. Antisemitism provides a solution for the painful conflict between ideals and reality by blaming all evil on the Jews. This, however, does not solve the real, existing problems, but only makes the German soul unable to deal with them. Urges German educators and youth psychologists to actively combat and not just resist antisemitism, and calls for the creation of a scientific center for the study of antisemitism.

Die Landauer Judengemeinde : ein Abriss ihrer Geschichte., 1969.

Scope and Contents

87 pages with illustrations.;Relates the history of the Jews in Landau from the mid-13th century on, mentioning occasional acts of discrimination or persecution in the medieval and early modern periods (p. 5-13). Pp. 43-82 deal with the Holocaust period. Pp. 66-76 present a list, from an index compiled in 1942 by the police, of the 294 Jews who were living in the town on 10 November 1938 and their fate (from 1938 to June 1942). 25% emigrated to other countries, 58% migrated to other towns in Germany, and the rest were deported to Gurs in 1940, and in 1942 from Gurs to Auschwitz.

Euer Name lebt : zur Geschichte der Juden in der Region Bersenbrück / Maria von Borries., 1997.

Scope and Contents

Surveys the history of Jews in Bersenbrück (Lower Saxony) from the beginning of their settlement there in 1835 until the Holocaust. Pp. 201-353 deal with the Nazi period, describing the discrimination and persecution of the Jews, and finally their deportation. Mentions emigration of Jewish residents between 1933-39. During the "Kristallnacht" pogrom, Jewish men were arrested and deported to Buchenwald and Sachsenhausen. In December 1941, fourteen residents were deported to Riga; in March 1942, three were deported via Piaski to Belzec, where they were murdered. Of those remaining, ca. 30 were interned in April 1942 in a "Jewish house" in Alfhausen, from where they were deported in July 1942 to Theresienstadt; eleven were transported from there to Treblinka in September 1942 and fifteen were transported to Auschwitz between January 1943-October 1944.;Photocopy of an extract taken from a book; this article only; 7 pages with illustrations; Part of the Bernhard Herzberg Archive, donated by his son Paul.

Rahel Ruth Sinasohn : das Leben einer talentierten, charmanten, gläubigen Jüdin, 1891-1969 / nac erzählt von M.M. Sinasohn., ©1969.

Scope and Contents

Sinasohn traces the life of his wife, Rahel Ruth (née Cohn) in 1891 in Gnesen. Pp. 33-72 describe Sinasohn's own and his wife's experiences from the 1930s until 1944, when they were liberated. Thanks to luck and their own resourcefulness, the couple managed to live relatively undisturbed in Berlin until 1942, although they were arrested a few times. Three of their four children emigrated in 1939, and the couple also managed to send most of their valuables abroad. Between 1940-41 they secretly helped Jews in Warsaw by sending food and other packages, creating a whole network around them. In 1942 they fled to Brussels with the help of false IDs they had themselves produced. In Brussels, they went into hiding, but in 1943, while her husband was absent, Rahel Ruth was arrested by the Gestapo together with her daughter, son-in-law, and granddaughter. The daughter and son-in-law were deported to Auschwitz, where they perished, but Rahel Ruth and her granddaughter were freed so that Rahel Ruth could work as a nurse at a Jewish hospital. Her husband, who had been the head of a Jewish school in Berlin, had arranged the job for her. After the liberation of Brussels in 1944, the couple moved to Antwerp, and in 1947 they left for Eretz Israel.;A portrait, retold by M. Sinasohn, Jerusalem; 93 pages with illustrations.

The burning of the synagogue in Neustettin : ideological arson in the 1880s / Stephen C.J. Nicholls., 1999.

Scope and Contents

On 18 February 1881 the synagogue in Neustettin (now Szczecinek), Pomerania, was set on fire. The destruction of the synagogue was received with either indifference or cynical approval by the Christian majority and the conservative press. The authorities arrested five Jews who were falsely accused of committing the arson in order to obtain the insurance money; after two trials, four of the Jews were imprisoned. The arson was followed by riots in the town in summer 1881 and other disturbances in the vicinity. The arson and the ensuing riots were undoubtedly provoked by Ernst Henrici, who visited Neustettin five days earlier with a series of incendiary antisemitic speeches. The economic depression of the 1870s in rural Pomerania made its inhabitants vulnerable to the influence of political agitators.;Centre for German-Jewish Studies Research Paper; 19 pages.

The Holocaust.

Scope and Contents

Six million Jews of all ages, strata and affiliations were murdered in the Holocaust. The hundreds of thousands who escaped, whether by hiding or by joining the underground or partisan units and the few who survived the camps refused to return to their former homes. Those lands had become graveyards to them, and they could not face the prospect of resuming life in those countries. The very few who had survived the period of darkness, suffering and death and who had returned to their native cities and villages in Eastern Europe were received with anger and hostility. The survivors, unwanted in their former homes and weary of a life of tribulation and adversity, waged a stubborn struggle for the right to immigrate to the land of Israel. - p. 75, [79].;Heavily illustrated magazine with some text, 79 pages.
